ALEXANDRIA, May 15.—The good people of Alexandria are very much disgusted at the light sentence—sight years in the peniteutiars—that Jeff. Philips, the mandere of George S. Smith, got for his crime after having been sentenced to hang at a former trial.

The verdict, which was not returned until midnight Saturday, was a great surprise, as it was thought the jury would fail to agree, having been out about twenty-four hours. Messis, Burke & Breat have made a motion for a new trial, which will be argued on Monday next, but Judge Morton will overfule it, and it is certain the case will not be carried to the Court of Appeals.

"There is no disloyally to Democracy in my friends viewing it from their standpoint. It is not specially in my interest, but first, and above all, in the interest of our grand old Democratic party. If I am not the man turn me down and select somebody else. Not for the world would I allow selfish motives to stand in the way of Democratic success. Everything and everybody must be made subservent to carrying the next Legislature; too much depends on it. We might lose all our judges, senator, basement officers, &c. This is not trying to alarm anybody into my support. It is what I believe more than halt the people of this State believe and fear. We can't afford to throw even a damper on any small portion of our farmer supporters. As to the sectional question I have but little to say.

"Southwest Virginia is getting to be a great industrial section, with its coal, and riron, and lead, and zine, and copper, and timber, and railroads. union bitween city and county.

"I am thankful I read in the signs of the times that our Virginia cities see the propriety of cultivating and standing in with that great section and of helping her on in her growth. And I am persuaded Richmond is not going to be behind Norfolk and Portsmouth and Petersburg and Roanoke and Lynchburg in her efforts to catch the trade of that grand section. Our cities have been too much asleep and have been too sentimental in their poilties. They need to bring business into the camp. Why should not Richmond have her hundreds of thousands of population and many industries and great trade interests like Baltimore and Philadelphia? She has the natural advantages, but she has allowed the cities in our border States to grow at her expense, and she ought no longer to be run over, tunneled under, or whipped around, but awake to her opportunities, and how better than to clasp hands with that great Southwest section and get her trade, at least a proper proportion of it? Why, there is trade enough up there to make Norfolk and Richmond as important as Baltimore and Philadelphia.

"The development of our State's material resources, the building up of our cities, and the amelioration of the condition of the farmers and the laboring people ought to be. Every one of our national questions are settled or in the hands of our party. Let these things rest in the wisdom of those to whose charge they have been committed. The settlement of the tariff and the great fluancial issues are removed from the arens of politics. Give our party a chance to see how these questions will be handled. Something of Interest to the World in General, but Richmond in Particular.

To begin well in an undertaking is to have half completed that undertaking; or, as our Spanish friends say: "Buen principle, la mitude es hecha." If this be true, and there is no reason for doubting it, it will be safe to predict a successful career for Richmond's latest banking enterprise. The officers of this institution, which has been duly chartered, are as follows:

Edw. Hanewinekel, secretary and treasurer.

Edw. Hanewinckel, secretary and treasurer.

Board of Directors: P. H. Mayo, S. H. Hawes, T. William Pemberton, Howard Swineford, J. N. Cullingworth, George Ross, Edw. Hanewinckel, Charles H. Talbott, and Jackson Brandt.

Interest and dividends will be collected, securities of well-established value and character will be bought and sold, deposits will be received, the rate of interest to be fixed by agreement, and loans will be made on real estate and collateral.

With such an able corps of well-known financiers as those who centrol tais bank, its ultimate success is merely a question of time, and a very short space of time at that.
